GLOBAL PICTURE

VALUES STEADY, RENTS RISING, WEALTH STILL GROWING

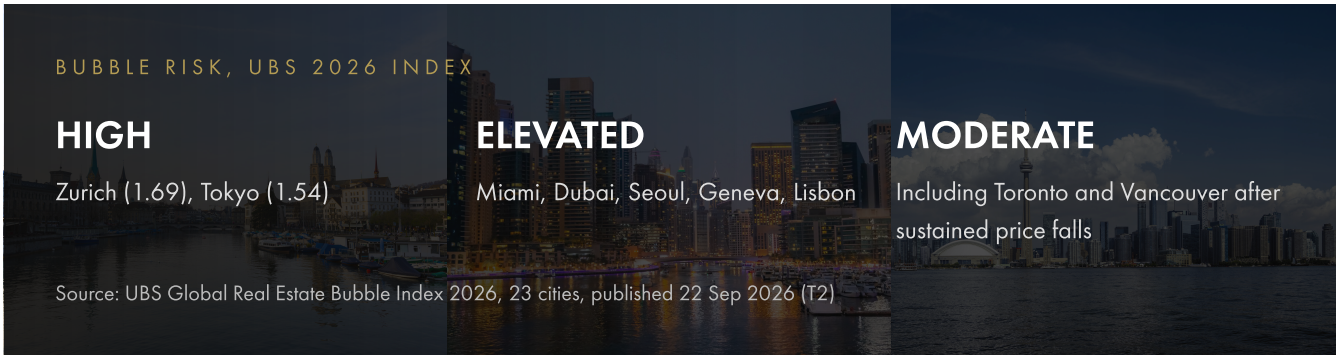

Across the 30 world cities Savills tracks, prime capital values rose 0.6% in the first half of 2026 and rents 1.1%, with 60% of cities posting growth. Tokyo led at 7.0%.

On the official measure, the Bank for International Settlements put global real house prices 1.2% lower in the year to Q1 2026, with the UK and US each down 2% in real terms and the euro area up 2.6%.

Wealth keeps compounding. Knight Frank counts 713,626 individuals worth over USD 30m in 2026, against 551,435 in 2021. Altrata ranks London fourth among the world's billionaire cities, with 79, though the UK recorded no net gain in 2025.

LONDON IN DEPTH

PRIME LONDON STEADIES WHILE THE WIDER CITY LAGS

Prime central London values ended the third quarter close to where they began the year. Knight Frank's index stood at 5,004.4 in September, against 5,014.3 last December, and exchanges across prime central and prime outer London in the year to September were 2.5% below the previous twelve months.

The wider London market has been weaker. The official UK House Price Index put London's annual change at −3.5% in September, the lowest of any English region, while the North East rose 4.6%. London flats fell 6.3%, their fourteenth consecutive annual fall.

Official London data runs about two months behind; September, published on 18 November, is the latest month.
